ÉCOLE CENTRALE DE NANTES

Name:

First name:

The law is a rule of conduct in society which applies to all. Protecting both the individual and society, it lies at the junction between general interest and individual freedom. It defines our rights, but also our duties. It may thus prohibit, or even sanction, certain acts which are dangerous or harmful to oneself or the community.

The students of École Centrale de Nantes belong to a community governed by general and specific regulations that apply uniformly to each of its members.

The school itself, as a public institution, is subject to rules and regulations, the application of which impacts its members.

Ecole Centrale de Nantes students are bearers of the school's values and as such, must conduct themselves as upstanding citizens, and abide by French law and, in particular, the establishment's internal and academic rules and regulations.

In all aspects of their conduct, both on and off campus, Centrale Nantes students are respectful of others (staff members, students etc.), of property (personal or otherwise) and of the school's image.

This respect is expressed in the observation of the current rules of society. It includes the prohibition of any act, attempt or complicity in hazing or hazing-related practices.

Each member of the student community must be careful to maintain a welcoming atmosphere in which everyone feels free to be themselves. No act of physical or verbal violence, or discrimination, shall be tolerated, particularly if such acts occur because of the targeted individuals' known or presumed ethnic group, religion, gender identity or sexual or romantic orientation.

The introduction into the establishment and consumption of alcoholic beverages, substances or plants classified as narcotics is prohibited. Smoking on the premises is also prohibited.

Non-compliance with the regulations may lead to disciplinary sanctions and possibly even legal proceedings provided for by law.

Any disrespect for these regulations is punishable with disciplinary sanctions, as well as possible legal proceedings.
